

Miscellaneous.

An accomplished book-keeper whishes us to say that he will give any man $10,000 a year who will procure for him the position of confidential clerk of Mr. Alkal Babbitt.

Man—"Do you think it would be safe for me to that cross this pasture?" Said—"Well, the old bull don't like red very much, but if you will chalk your nose I guess he won't attack you."

"Which accounts for the unusually interesting paper we publish this week," as the young man, temporarily left in charge of a rural exchange said, when he announced his boss's absence in New York.

David Dudley Field is not a teacher of penmanship. Recently he signed a legal document, and sent it to a printer in Albany. The proof was sent to him to read, and "David Dudley Field" in manuscript appeared in type as "Tried and duly filed."

"The boy at the head of the class will state what where the dark ages of the world?" Boy hesitates. "Next, Master Biggs, can you tell me what the dark ages were?" "I guess they were the ages before spectacles were invented." "Go to your seats."

A young woman in Chicago put her talons teeth in a glass of water at night, and in the morning found them imbedded in a chunk of solid ice. She was late at breakfast, the process of thawing out the teeth with a bunch of matches having been slow.

"Will your Honor please charge the jury?" asked an Arkansas lawyer at the conclusion of a horse-traitor trial. "I will," replied his Honor, "the Court charges each jurymen one dollar for drinks, and six dollars extra for the one who used the Court's hat for a spittoon during the first day of the session."

A lady remarked to a popular divine that his sermons were a little too long. "Don't you think so?" said she, "just a little?" "All I dare madam," replied the divine, "I am afraid you don't like the sincere milk of the Word." "Yes, I do," said she; "but you know the fashion nowadays is condensed milk."

Judge Brady, of New York, tells this good story: He was one day on the wharf when an emigrant ship was coming in. An Irish laborer, who knew him, edged alongside, and, after a look at the crowded ship, turned to the Judge and said: "Tell ye what, Mither Brady, thin furriers is goin' to play the divil with us entirely. What'll we do at all, at all?"

A clergyman of a country village church desired to give notice that there would be no service in the afternoon, as he was going to officiate for another clergyman. The clerk, as soon as the sermon was finished, rose up with all due solemnity, and cried out, "I am requested to give notice that there will be no service this afternoon, as Mr. L. is going fishing with another clergyman."

The boys of Winnemucca, Nevada, had some fun with a showman. They formed a line from the ticket office extending around a near corner. Each asked the price of admission, and when being told that it was fifty cents, shook his head, said it was too dear, retired, and tell it at the rear of the lane. This was kept up until the showman, astounded by the unanimity and the seemingly great number, reduced the charge, and then every boy cleared out.

A fellow in Kentucky ran away with a farmer's daughter and horse, and was hotly pursued. The farmer got within close range, and flourished a revolver. "Don't shoot, for heaven's sake!" shouted the lover. "I won't be the reply 'cause I'm afraid I'll hit her horse. Just leave her han and take the gal." The compromise was accepted by the young folks, who walked on to the preacher's house, the father riding home on his horse.

At Saratoga, the other day, a bridegroom stepped off the cars for a moment and the train went off with his bride. He followed by the next train down, and she on the other hand returned by the next train up, and they passed each other on the road. This operation was repeated, each trip leaving them at different ends of the route, until a peremptory telegram kept the bride stationary until her husband reached her. —New York Commercial Advertiser.

"And have you no other sons?" asked a curious lady of a bronzed old sea captain. "Oh, yes, madam, I had one that lived in the South Sea Islands for nearly a dozen years," "Really! Was he bred there? what was his name—the sea or land?" "No, madam, he wasn't breed—he was meat; leastwise the negroes ate him, and as far as his taste the chief said he tasted of terbaceous." The lady walked to another part of the ship, and the captain smiled and took a fresh quid.

Patronize Home Manufactures."THE CLIMAX."

I wish to announce to the farmers of central Kansas, that our new permanently located at Salina, Kansas, and intend manufacturing my improved Farming Mill there. Having had an experience of over 12 years in the business, I have made a study of the market, and find that the Climax is no equal for the greatest variety of plowing that can be done by its drawing anything in the shape of a grain, from a small plot to a large field. I also make in connection with my mill a small harness, a very neat one, with wire on doors and sides, with single or three clevises, and light, two things indispensable for the raising of cream, every machine warranted to be of the best material, and the smallest joint will be guaranteed.
